The Presidential Elections Committee noted that some sites published a video containing footage of persons marking ballots in favour of the first candidate. The Committee has examined the footage and found that the ballot cards used in this video are not the ones accredited by the Presidential Elections Committee as the size of the paper is quite different from the size adopted. Also, the special marked placed at the top of each paper to prevent it from being forged is missing. This mark separates the paper from the booklet and is divided in two halves, part remains attached to the ballot and the other half remains in the booklet. The Committee also points out that a “pencil” was used in the footage to mark.
